New SES manager to forge closer links with principal contractors

Following its recent success in securing new contract wins worth more than £75 million and the opening of its new Bristol office, award winning building services provider, SES, is delighted to announce the appointment of a new Operations Manager, Nick Cox.

Nick, will be based in Bristol and will report directly to the Divisional Director for the West & Central Division, Robert Doherty. Nick will be responsible for all operational aspects of the Bristol office as well as building a high quality, sustainable business in the South West region.

Commenting on the new appointment, Peter Lewis, Chief Operating Officer for SES said, "This new position enables our business to maintain sustainable growth in the South West. Nick is extremely knowledgeable and has a wealth of experience from years of working on a number of complex, multi-faceted and high profile projects. I'm confident that his skills and passion for his job will help forge closer relationships with our targeted channels to market, in our targeted sectors."

Recent new SES contracts include: John Lennon Airport; Goodhope Hospital and Bournville College in Birmingham; Holland Park School in London and various Building Schools for the Future (BSF) schools in Nottingham, Durham and Hull.
